

The Future of Careers in Scholarship

How can scholars pursue quality research in a work environment increasingly driven by financial considerations?

How can we facilitate non-traditional careers and independent research?

Do you want to help build a more inclusive and humane approach to scholarship?

Join us for the first Ronin Institute Unconference
Saturday, November 5, 2016, from 10:00AM to 4:30PM
The Democracy Center, located in Harvard Square
45 Mount Auburn Street, Cambridge, MA.

The nature of careers in research and scholarship is changing rapidly, and the traditional academic job market is more competitive than ever. New technologies are making possible new, alternative models of careers in scholarship. We hope you will join us in a discussion of these challenges and opportunities.

In the “unconference” format, participants work together to shape the details of the agenda. The bulk of our time will be devoted to breakout sessions where small groups of participants convene around topics of mutual interest.
